June 16 Program

Tracy Grimmer introduced Conner King, Dylan Smith, and Emma Wrede with Bartlett Grain. They are building a new facility on Rt. 40 near Sheffield, and they gave an overview of their history and operations. The business has been family owned since the 1900s in one way or another. In 2018, they joined the Savage family of companies. The Bartlett team has headquarters in Kansas City, Missouri and there are grain and milling facilities located across the US, Canada, and Mexico. Bartlett provides grain merchandising for producers and end users, and they are also a source for fertilizers. They have a soybean crushing plant in Kansas and are a key part of the renewable fuels chain. The crushing facility takes in 49 million bushels annually. Bartlett has 3 flour mills, and they process the equivalent of 4 million pounds of flour per day. Some of their product is used by Kellanova, Krispy Kreme, Tyson Foods, Papa John's, and Bimbo (think about that the next time you're enjoying Cheez-It crackers!) The Bartlett crew spoke about logistics and noted that most product is transported by rail, although some is hauled by truck. Annually, they service around 100,000 trainloads or 40,000 truck loads. They are able to store 3 million bushels of soybeans and 5 million gallons of soy oil. The Sheffield site is nearly a carbon copy of the Jacksonville location. The presentation ended with Q&A. We learned the company has about 1,300 employees, and they will hire about 20 at Sheffield. Planned hours are 7 a.m. - 9 p.m., and they will only handle corn in Sheffield right now. The company deals in farmer-direct and commercial business. For more information, visit www.bartlettco.com.
